

whereby parents lay their child on their back to sleep at night so they do not suffocate whilst sleeping, however this along with jungle gyms where the child spends a large amount of time laying on their back, can cause malformation of the skull effecting the child's ear canals, brain development, head shape and facial appearance. This is of great benefit to every child irrelevant of how soon they learn to crawl or walk, and can especially help those with muscle disabilities. It soon became apparent that our product could be the answer to every parents prayers for children up until school age.

Wow - so you have actually hit on something brand new there! Have you had any interest as yet?

Tracy :: Both a leading international children's store and a popular UK catalogue have expressed interest in stocking our product, but with the catch that they could not place an order without first having the product in their hands. Frustratingly, without an order we can not afford the £300,000 for the manufacture and distribution of the product. It seemed that after all our efforts we had hit a brick wall, and so close to the finish line.

But you don't give up that easily do you?! I can see how passionate you are about completing this - what else is up your sleeve?

Tracy :: Well, to help raise funds for the mobility aid we came up with the idea of a set of books that can teach children about relevant issues such as growing their own veg, recycling and cooking with your family.

I wrote the text to rhyme, so it is fun to read, and designed the pictures myself. Babies can look at the pictures and enjoy the rhymes and toddlers and older children can enjoy having a go at the recipes and tasks. It is nice to do things as a family and I would like to think that families could pass them down through the generations.

We are hoping to support the Government's Change for Life initiative, and have also had an interest from local schools. We are hoping to hit the pre-Christmas market and get the ball rolling from there.

Many would have thought that having a young child would make all the time and effort required seem too much - what do you say to that?

Tracy :: If I had not have had Millie, I don't think I would have done it. Never in a million years did I think I would be in this position. I

Becoming a parent last year was a wake up call, suddenly everything took on new meaning and purpose. Everything I do is for my daughter have always been determined, but having children puts you in a different walk of life where everything has meaning and purpose. She has given me inspiration and got me wondering how I could make things better. Millie has given me the drive to push it forward. We want to make this happen, help children and continue to expand and make a real difference.

Crossed fingers this all goes to plan, how can we find out more?

Tracy :: We have a new website, www.dizkis.co.uk as well as an email address info@dizkis.co.uk. We would love to hear from anyone who might be able to assist us with the manufacture and distribution of the product, as well as any contacts who may be of assistance.
